Reasons for nominating a person to serve on the IASSW Board

I have known Prof Janestic Mwendé Twikirize, for over 10 years. During this time, she has been working with dedication and generosity to promote social work education around the world and especially in the African Continent. She had served with great enthusiasm both with the board of directors of IASSW and ASSWA in different capacities, including Vice president of the African Association of Schools of Social Work and five years as a member of the IASSW Board. She chaired the IASSW Nominating Committee and continues to serve as a member of the Capacity Building Committee to strengthen social work education in diverse countries. Janestic is also endowed with great personality and capacity to interact in diverse cultural settings and with people from different corners of the world. I had the chance to work with her in different committees both at IASSW and ASSWA. She has organized large and successful conferences on social work education, drawing participants from multiple continents. Deeply concerned about the development of social work education around the world, Prof Janestic, has been conducting research on issues related to social work education and practice. I had the pleasure and opportunity working with her as co-researcher in a research on the history of social work education in Africa. She is aware of the strategic issues of social work education and social work organisations and can contribute immensely in the development and promotion of IASSW agenda and vision. For all these reasons, both myself and Lynne Healy, are nominating her for the election to serve on the board of IASSW in the position of Secretary of IASSW.
